TRUSTEES' MEETING.

The regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of the city of Glendale was held in the City Hall, Monday evening, March 31, 1913. There were present T. W. Watson, President of the Board; G. B. Woodberry, City Clerk; Trustees Tower, Lane, Thompson and Coker. There were also present, H. B. Lynch, Manager Lighting Department; Edw. M. Lynch, City Engineer; O. W. Tarr, Street Superintendent; H. M. Miller, City Marshal.

It being necessary for City Clerk Woodberry to absent himself from the meeting, Trustee Tower was chosen clerk pro tem. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved.

The bids for doing street work were opened by the clerk and read. On motion same were referred to the City Engineer.

Bids for furnishing wire to be used in the lighting department were read, and upon recommendation of Manager of Lighting Department, the contract was awarded to the United States Products company.

A petition asking that the water fountain at the corner of Broadway and Brand boulevard be removed was read. The City Clerk was instructed to communicate with the Valley Improvement Association concerning the removal of the fountain.

A petition concerning the improvement of walks on Ivy street was read and same referred to City Engineer.

At eight o'clock a hearing was given taxpayers on Vine street, who had entered a protest as to the condition in which the contractor had left the road. They asked that the contractor be required to give a bond of $1,000 as a guarantee that the road would be put in good condition if the material composing the road failed to harden within a period of six months. Contractor McCoombs was present and informed the trustees and the Vine street representatives that he is willing to give a $1,000 bond as a guarantee that said street will, if necessary, be put in good condition. On motion it was decided to take the question up at the next regular meeting of the board Monday evening, April 7.

Representatives of the Pure Fruit Juice company, who have opened a plant at the corner of Lomita street and Glendale avenue, were present and asked that the Board of Trustees assist them in disposing of the refuse matter that collects. The question was referred to the proper committee.

Motion carried that the Superintendent of Streets be instructed to proceed at once to complete the roadway to the city's lot in Canyon where preparations are being made to dump tin cans and certain kinds of rubbish.

Messrs. A. B. Heacock, Herman Nelson, W. R. Phelon and W. B. Kirk, in company with a Mr. Miller, a representative of the Chamber of Commerce of the city of Glendale appeared before the Board of Trustees, asking that a $300 space be taken for the purpose of advertising Glendale to the Arrow Head, a publication issued by the Salt Lake Railroad company. The issue comprises 40,000 copies, which are distributed along the line of the company's roads. On motion $300 worth of space was contracted for in said publication, the details of the same to be left in hands of the Public Welfare committee.

On motion the City Attorney was instructed to prepare an ordinance prohibiting the raising and keeping of pigs within the city of Glendale, and also an ordinance governing too heavily loaded vehicles passing over the streets. On motion the board adjourned until Thursday evening, April 3.

INTERMEDIATE SCHOOL PARENT TEACHER FEDERATION.

The first meeting of the Intermediate School Parent Teacher Association will be called Friday afternoon promptly at 3:15.

A pleasant feature will be musical selections by the pupils of the school under the direction of Miss Foster, head of the musical department.

A general discussion of plans for the future work of the organization will be held.

An invitation is extended to all who are interested and particularly to the parents of pupils in the sixth grades of the different schools.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON CLUB.

The next meeting of the Tuesday Afternoon club will be held at Masonic Hall, as usual, April 8, at 2:30 o'clock. All members are requested to be present, as a number of matters of importance are to be discussed. The program will consist of club talent entirely. Mr. Charles Giblyn, who was to give a reading, has recently accepted the managership of the "101" Bison Moving Picture Co. and will not be able to be present.

The club expects to add a Legislative Department, and all matters of this nature will be taken up by this department.

NINETY-ONE BIRTHDAY CANDLES

On Thursday evening March 27th, in honor of his ninety-first birthday anniversary friends and relations of Mr. John A. Freese, gathered at the home of his son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Freese of 262 West Fifth street.

Six o'clock dinner was promptly served at a table daintily decorated with masses of California poppies and ferns, typical of the sunshine of his California home. Quaint little poppy place-cards furthered the plan of decoration.

The feature of the dinner was the immense birthday cake bearing ninety-one blazing candles, which the honored guest was privileged to extinguish.

Following the dinner a pleasant evening was enjoyed by the guests, who were, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hildreth of North Dakota and daughter, Miss Lucille Hildreth; Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Snyder of Los Angeles; Mrs. J. H. Clark of Los Angeles; Miss Lillie Dudley of Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lampert of West Fifth street, Glendale; Mr. Edward Fullerton of Glendale; Little Miss Dorothy Freese and Master Robert Freese.

The guest of the evening was well remembered with numerous handsome gifts.

PAUL SELBY.

The death of this veteran Illinois editor is announced, his demise occurring at the home of his daughter in Chicago recently.

Mr. Selby was the last to be "mustered out" of that brave company of Illinois editors who took a positive stand in opposition to the spread of slavery, and who, at a convention at Decatur, formed their lines of opposition before the Republican party was named, in such bold and broad pronouncement, that the announcement became a text for similar action in other states, resulting finally in the Republican party, and culminating in the election of Lincoln in 1860. The task undertaken by these heroic men should not be obscured by seeming more important events, or forgotten among the facts of history. Inspired by the leadership of Abraham Lincoln these men led off in a fight for principles, with not a cent of campaign money in pocket, or an office of any size in sight, and often were menaced by threats at the polls and on the stump.

Mr. Selby was a quiet, scholarly man, and his editorial work—chiefly on the Springfield, Ill., State Journal, was forceful and efficient. Right up to his "crossing the bar" he pursued his studious historic labors. His many old-time friends now on the coast will simply say, "Another good man gone."

"Peace to his ashes!" —S. P.

PEOPLE'S ORCHESTRA CONCERT.

The benefit performance for the flood sufferers, given by the People's Orchestra was well attended. The People's Chorus of 150 voices sang with the orchestra and was enthusiastically received. Mr. Anthony Carlson sang the solo part of "The King's Prayer," from Lohengrin. Those who made up the quartette were Miss Helen B. Copper, Mrs. Elliot, Mr. G. Haydn Jones and Mr. Fred C. McPherson; they were joined by the entire chorus. The chorus also sang "Hall, Bright Abode," from Tannehauser.

Mr. J. Raimondi, a member of the orchestra, gave a clarinet solo with orchestral accompaniment and responded to two hearty encores. Interesting orchestral numbers were "Prohibited Music" and "Vision of Nymphs" by Adolph Tandler, a local composer; the new comedy overture, "Puck," by Strube; and the "Dance of the Hours" from Gioconda, by Ponchielli.

An excellent program has been arranged for next Sunday.

"SURPRISE PROGRAM."

On Wednesday evening Chapter L. of P. E. O. met at the home of Mrs. George U. Moyle on West Fifth street for an evening meeting.

The business session was presided over by the new president, Mrs. Elizabeth Brown. After the business of the evening was transacted the meeting was given over to Miss Rena Severance and Miss Lorraine Mitchell, who entertained the members with the surprise program of the year.

Several unique games were indulged in which occasioned much mirth and jollity. Professor A. W. Tower, special guest of the evening, wisely consulted the dictionary as to how to sew a man on horseback in black thread on a white cloth, and accordingly won head prize, a miniature red rocking horse.

Following the games, Miss Rena Severance rendered several delightful piano selections and Mrs. Edith Hunchberger gave a number of charming readings.

P. E. O. will next meet at the home of Mrs. E. U. Emery, on Kenwood street, at 10:30 on Wednesday morning, April 9th.

REMINGTON STREET SCHOOL TEACHERS ENTERTAIN.

The teachers of the Remington Street school have proven that they are capable of not only teaching, but entertaining as well and on Thursday afternoon, March 27, they had the mothers of their pupils as guests.

There was no business of the P. T. A. on this day, merely a few opening words by the president, Mrs. E. D. Yard, and the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting by the secretary, Mrs. Padelford. The afternoon was then turned over to the teachers, with the principal, Mrs. Cora S. Taylor, in the chair. As a general rule, these entertainments have consisted mainly of something in the musical and literary line, but this particular afternoon was devoted to the reading of papers by the special teachers in the Glendale schools, dealing with their different lines of work. These papers were all very interesting and brought the parents in much closer touch with the work that is being given their children, and making them feel more appreciative of the earnest efforts of these teachers in behalf of the children.

Vocal numbers were furnished by pupils of the Sixth grade, and also some of the tiny ones of the First and Second grades, with Miss Ella White Foster, musical instructor, in charge. These numbers were remarkably rendered, considering the age of the children, and Miss Foster received many compliments. Others on the program were: Miss Herberts, special teacher in drawing; Miss Thayer, Sloyd; Miss Woodbridge, domestic science. Miss McIntyre, in charge of the ungraded room, greatly interested those present with the work in her line. "Self Government" was the subject explained by Miss Maybelle Douglass, teacher of the Sixth grade, who has taken up this work, and with the hearty co-operation of the pupils, is making a great success of the same.

The different rules were read, and woe betide the boy or girl who disobeys them! Mrs. Charles H. Toll greatly interested her hearers with a paper relating to the position of parent and teacher, which she read before the Southern California Teachers' Association at the late convention held in Los Angeles. Mrs. Toll, who as Miss Eleanor Joy was a prominent teacher in the public schools of Los Angeles some years ago, was highly esteemed by everyone, and much beloved by all her pupils (the writer being fortunate enough to be counted among them).

Miss Woodbridge, domestic science teacher, was placed as the last speaker on the program because of the fact that she was in such close proximity to the delightful refreshments in store—home-made cakes and ice cream. A social hour was then enjoyed and a very pleasant afternoon brought to a close.

THE "EASTER BALL."

Among the most brilliant of the post-Lenten social events was the Easter ball given Thursday evening by the members of the Elks' Lodge, 1289, in honor of their ladies, in the beautifully decorated Elks' club rooms. Bouquets and branches of fluffy golden acacia transformed every nook and corner of the artistic ball rooms, which were illuminated with myriads of lights softly shaded with purple and white, the Elks' colors.

The ball was opened by a grand march, led by the Exalted Ruler, Mr. Peter L. Ferry, and his sister, Miss Perry, after which dance after dance, accompanied by the soft strains of music played by a five-piece stringed orchestra, was enjoyed by the members and their guests.

Punch was found at a dainty flower-decked table, and late in the evening the dining-room was thrown open, and supper was served at tiny tables, each graced with a centerpiece of white and purple blossoms and quaint testoons of purple satin ribbon. Colonel William Herman West responded to the eleven o'clock toast.

The house committee, comprising Mr. John Lawson, Mr. Archie Parker and Mr. John Faucett, presided as hosts of the evening.

This was the first of a series of elaborate social events which will follow in the coming months.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

M. P. Harrison, leader of the "Boosters," and T. W. Watson, leader of the "Join Us" members of the Chamber of Commerce of Glendale, are doing diligent work in securing new members. Both of these leaders are proving successful solicitors and it is being kept quiet just how many applications each gentleman has secured. The popular thing for every citizen to do at present is to become a member of the Chamber of Commerce. The "Booster" members are wearing a white button and the "Join Us" members are wearing a red button. Secretary Kirk, who is on neutral ground, is wearing both buttons.

PROGRESS OF NEW LIBRARY.

Members of the Glendale Library Board met in joint session with the Board of Trustees of this city Thursday evening, March 27. The main discussion was concerning selecting an architect. After due consideration a vote was taken, assigning this responsible position to Mr. Tuttle of Glendale. In making the selection considerable emphasis was placed upon giving the work to a resident of Glendale. At this meeting the suggestion was made that the building committee in company with the architect visit neighboring cities for the purpose of gaining ideas as to the architectural plans of library buildings. The members of the Library Board are Dr. A. L. Bryant, chairman; Mrs. R. A. Blackburn, Mrs. Mary A. Gridley, J. E. Henderson, W. W. McElroy, Mrs. J. C. Danford, Librarian.

WEEKLY MEETING OF GLENDALE LODGE 388, I. O. O. F.

There will be a district meeting on Monday evening, April 7th, at the I. O. O. F. Hall on Broadway, to which all members of District 42 and visitors are most cordially invited. Don't fail to keep this in mind, as it will be unusually interesting, and in addition to the meeting, and as a fit climax, there will be a sumptuous banquet, such as the Odd Fellows alone can serve. It will certainly be an "odd fellow" who does not heed the invitation.

The building committee is making rapid progress toward the erection of the new hall, and it will be a matter of but a short time until Glendale lodge will have a home of their own and one to be proud of, and a credit to the town.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Roper will celebrate the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding with a basket picnic at Echo Park on April 20th. Members of Glendale lodge and families are invited. April 20 is observed in place of April 17 in order that every one may have a better opportunity to attend. Mr. Roper has been an Odd Fellow for sixty years, also.

CONGRESS OF MOTHERS.

A district meeting of the California Congress of Mothers will be held in Los Angeles on Thursday, April 10th, at Blanchard Hall. All members of Parent-Teacher Federations and all women interested are urged to attend. The all-day session will open at 10:30 in the morning.

Among the lists of speakers are M. G. Waterhouse of the George Junior Republic for boys, who will speak on that institution; Mrs. C. R. Vance, who will discuss Boys' Clubs for dependent boys, and Dr. Jessie A. Russell, who will give an address on Boys' Clubs from a mother's viewpoint.

MR. LAMPERT SURPRISED.

John P. Lampert, who last Thursday, March 27, was enjoying his 44th anniversary of his birth in his usual quiet way, was agreeably surprised in the evening by a large number of the Brotherhood of the Methodist church. Music, both vocal and instrumental, gave added life to the occasion. An inviting dinner was served between the hours of nine and ten. Interesting talks were given by Oliver Clark, H. A. Wilson and Rev. Blackburn.

DELAY IN SCHOOL BONDS PROPOSITION.

No decisive action was taken in reference to the proposed school bonds by the Glendale people who attended the mass meeting held last Saturday night in the Intermediate school. The attendance was fairly large and those present were, apparently, in favor of instructing the school trustees to call the election for the voting of bonds for school purposes, but whether the amount of bonds suggested by the committee is the choice of the people was not definitely learned.

Instead of taking action as to whether or not the report of the committee should be adopted, the following resolution, which is self-explanatory, was adopted:

"The voting of a trifle more than $50,000 additional bonded indebtedness in the Glendale school district and the purchase of additional land for school purposes being of such vast importance to all of the people of Glendale school district, it is specially desired that all of the people be made thoroughly familiar with the plans proposed and to the end that the remotest sections of the school district be represented on the committee handling the matter, it is, therefore, Resolved, That the number and personnel of said committee be enlarged by this mass meeting, electing thereto and as members thereof John A. Pirtle, Frank Balthis, Mrs. Garrett, David Black, Mrs. Huey, Mrs. C. E. Hutchinson, J. Doyle, J. H. Badget, Frank Southard and T. F. Pierce, and that said committee so enlarged at its earliest convenience hold a meeting and reorganize and review the entire situation and report further to the people in mass meeting assembly on Saturday evening, April 5th, in the Intermediate school at 8 o'clock."

A. B. Heacock was chairman of the committee.

THIRTY TON GENERATOR.

A thirty-ton electric generator was transported through the city of Glendale, Saturday and Sunday. The Los Angeles Truck company had taken the contract to move this heavy piece of machinery to Montrose, where it will be used to furnish power for the new car line. The vehicle used was a heavy truck on which carload lots of merchandise are transported on the streets of Los Angeles. The heavy load in this instance was drawn by fourteen horses and twelve mules. Upon entering the city of Glendale Saturday it was found that so heavy a load could not pass over the streets without doing marked damage to them. The Truck company was placed under certain restrictions by Glendale's Superintendent of Streets, O. W. Tarr, and no progress was made until additional trucks were provided for the transportation of the machine. But little progress was made until about noon Sunday, when the Glendale house movers' trucks were exclusively placed beneath the machine, and then good time was made, and soon the great attraction disappeared from the streets.

APRIL 5 CLEAN-UP DAY.

It is indeed gratifying to note how generally the citizens of Glendale are making preparations to observe "Clean-up day," Saturday, April 5. The suggestion of setting apart such a day was first made by a committee of the Tuesday Afternoon club, who requested that the Board of Trustees of the city recommend that the date given above be made emphatically a time for removing from the streets, alleys, dooryards and vacant lots all rubbish. The Board of Trustees very heartily sanctioned the suggestion and have made public announcement that the proper officials of the city will do everything that is reasonable to co-operate with the citizens in making Saturday of this week a genuine clean-up day. Mr. Watson, president of the Board, states that the road to the city's lot at the canyon will be opened by that time, and that lot will be made the dumping ground for the city's rubbish. Glendale's 7,000 people will work in harmony on clean-up day.

IN FANCY DRESS.

On the evening of April 1st the members of the J. O. C. class of the Methodist Episcopal church gathered in quaint and ridiculous costumes at the home of Miss Ethel Andrea, on Brand boulevard, prepared to thoroughly enjoy the "stunt" party, which proved to be one of the jolliest affairs of the season.

The house was prettily decorated with cut flowers and ferns, and Miss Andrea was assisted in receiving the fantastic characters who were her guests by her mother and by Miss Daisy Rheinhardt.

The amusing costumes and the still more amusing stunts made the evening one of especial merriment and hilarity. Each guest brought an individual supper, which was enjoyed late in the evening, after which the hostess served the dessert course.

Special guests of the evening were Mrs. Viola Wright and Miss Maude Soper.

FEDERATED BROTHERHOOD.

Friday evening, March 28, in Filger's Hall, at 6:30 o'clock, was held a banquet by the Federated Brotherhood of Glendale. There were present at this feast of good things 250 members of this organization. The banquet was prepared and served by the ladies of the Christian church.

It had been announced that Mr. Sebastian, chief of police of Los Angeles, would deliver the address of the evening, but on account of illness he could not be present. Prof. Howe, chairman of the organization, gave a brief address along the line that Chief Sebastian had been announced to speak. Prof. Howe's remarks were to the point, and if heeded will bring forth great results. Attorney Oliver Clark, who always gets a warm reception from a Glendale audience, gave a twenty-minute address in which he emphasized the importance of every citizen living up to the requirements of the law. The speaker recommended that every law should be enforced. A pleasant feature of the program was music by the High School Mandolin club.

T. W. Watson, president of the Board of Trustees of the city of Glendale, spoke in behalf of raising money for the flood sufferers in Ohio and Indiana. In response to his earnest plea a $188 collection was taken up, and arrangements were made to receive clothing at the City Hall the following day. The meeting was greatly enjoyed by all present.

DEATH OF MRS. H. MCCALL GOODWIN.

Mrs. Ellen Brown J. Goodwin, wife of Rev. H. McCall Goodwin, International Evangelist, residing at 232 E. Second street, died very suddenly Friday, March 28. Death was due, probably, to apoplexy.

Mrs. Goodwin was born in Williamam, Conn., September 11, 1843, and at the time of her death was 69 years, 6 months and 17 days of age. She resided in Williamam for many years, teaching school and engaging in the millinery business until her marriage to Rev. H. McCall Goodwin, August 30, 1890, and for the past thirteen years she has resided in California, the last two years being a resident of Glendale.

The funeral services were held from the late home Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. Dr. William of the Congregational church, of which she was a member, officiating, assisted by Rev. Dr. Ward. Interment in Grandview cemetery.

AT CASA VERDUGO.

On Saturday evening at six-thirty o'clock Colonel Tom Thornton of Riverside Drive entertained the Bar Z boys at a stag dinner at Casa Verdugo, in honor of his son, Tom Thornton, Jr.

Unique and appropriate features of decoration were carried out and covers were arranged for ten, including Vernon Srinely, Hose Brown, Frank Little, Tom Richardson, Fred Farner, James Gibson, Louis Leppleman, Charles Wells, the honor guest and the host.

SIX O'CLOCK DINNER.

On Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Lynch of 907 Damasco Court presided at a charming six o'clock dinner given in honor of the seventh wedding anniversary and birthday anniversaries of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wattles of Glendale avenue.

Jonquils and maidenhair fern were daintily used. Unique gold and white place-cards marked covers arranged for twelve mutual friends of the host and hostess and the complimented couple.

The remainder of the evening was pleasantly passed with cards.

DEATH OF CHARLES E. TAYLOR.

Charles E. Taylor, residing at 241 Park avenue, Tropic, passed away Friday, March 28, 1913. He was born August 11, 1860, in Maryland, and at the time of his death his age was 52 years, 7 months and 17 days. Mr. Taylor had been a resident of Tropic for the past three years and is survived by a wife and daughter.

The funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 3 p. m., from the Pulliam Undertaking chapel, under the auspices of the Masonic lodge of Glendale. Interment was made in the Forest Lawn cemetery.

DAVID BLACK'S CANDIDACY.

David Black, who is a candidate for member of the Board of Trustees of the School District of Glendale, is highly spoken of by persons who have formed his acquaintance, and have social and business dealings with him. Mr. Black represents that portion of the district that has been represented by Trustee Sternberg, who announces he will not be a candidate for re-election. There will be no mistake made in casting a vote for Mr. Black at the election next Friday, April 4.

A civilian met "Miss Page and Mrs. Smith" at the Light street wharf in Baltimore. He took them to a Federal captain, and sent them to his superior officer, General Fisher. Belle Boyd, now "Mrs. Smith," stated their case.

"We are southerners, general, and we wish to go south by way of Harpers Ferry," she said, handing him a note which the captain had given her.

He read the note, looked at the pair with a quizzical expression and then nodded his head. "Very well, ladies. I will make out your passes, which will take you to General Kelly at Harpers Ferry. My jurisdiction ends there, but you will find General Kelly a courteous and considerate gentleman. Beyond that I can make no promises for him, you understand. If everything is all right, why—you will be all right. You will have an escort as far as Harpers Ferry, and an officer will be sent this afternoon to your boarding place to examine your baggage."

The baggage searcher found them duly prepared and no obstacle came up to prevent the girls from taking the westward bound train on the Baltimore and Ohio road at noon the next day. Their escort was a flirtatious young lieutenant, whom "Mrs. Smith"—newly widowed for the occasion—engaged in an instructive conversation about Federal matters, which lasted until toward sunset. The slow train drew up under the shadows of the frowning Virginia heights and heights of Maryland at the historic point where the Shenandoah river breaks through the mountain wall and falls into the Potomac—and they had reached their destination.

Evidently there was a riot going on in the little shut-in town at the end of the long railroad bridge across the Potomac, where the old arsenal and the engine house which had been John Brown's fort lay close upon the railroad tracks, with dwelling houses, barracks and taverns straggling up the hilly streets behind.

They held a consultation in the parlor of a "hotel" full of drunken soldiers and decided to go out and make inquiries of any one who might seem sober enough to answer as to where they could hire a vehicle to forward them on their journey. All uncertainty was promptly dispelled—they could not get out of Harpers Ferry that night.

Meanwhile they had discovered that General Kelly's office adjoined the place where they had been marooned, as it were. They sought out the commanding officer, who received them courteously, heard them with wonderful patience—under the circumstances—and on the whole was quite sympathetic. But what could he do?

"I can give you your passes," said he, "but I don't see what you are going to hire to travel in, unless an ox cart or a broken down wagon, and the roads are almost impassable, even for staunch vehicles. Besides, it is unsafe for you to travel without military escort, and that I have no authority to furnish. If you ladies were prisoners, now, I might send you through our lines under escort all right."

"That may happen to us before we get home," whispered Gertrude flippantly, though she felt like crying.

"And this is hardly a fit place for ladies to spend the night in," continued the general, in his role of Job's comforter.

"Do you mean that we ought to go back to Baltimore?" asked Belle Boyd energetically.

"Well, you see, ladies, you are in the difficult position of southerners sent south. The present policy of the government is to send all southerners below the line to stay, but they must be vouched for. I am only explaining the situation to you. I can't very well send you back without authority. Perhaps the best thing for you to do is to hold out at the hotel until I can telegraph to General Fisher. My orderly will notify you as soon as I hear from him."

"We will go back and wait," said Gertrude's companion determinedly. They noticed among the groups thronging the tavern a half dozen gray-coated Confederates who had been captured the day before. One of these, evidently an officer, paced restlessly up and down the room, while the guard kept an eye on him. He peered closely at the two girls as he passed them, and they returned his gaze with interest. Gertrude was wondering if she had not seen that face somewhere before, when suddenly, without stopping or turning his head, the man dropped these words in a stage whisper:

"Are you going south?"

"Yes," answered Belle Boyd like a flash.

At the next turn he muttered: "Take a word?"

Another affirmative.

"Get message to General Johnston at Richmond—across the room again—that you saw Captain Thornton here a prisoner."

Captain Thornton! Then it was he—Edward Thornton, Gertrude's Charleston acquaintance of a year ago last spring.

"What shall you do?" she whispered to Belle Boyd.

"That will depend on what they are going to do with us here," was the nonchalant reply. "I know this officer. He is an important man. If I can help him out I shall do so."

CHAPTER VI.
Shenandoah's Daughter.

Presently an orderly came in with a telegram from General Fisher to General Kelly. Its purport was that the ladies had been sent south at their own request, and no further intervention would be practicable.

"A pretty plight we're in!" exclaimed Gertrude, more boldly than she was aware. "We can't go south, we can't return north, and we can't remain here."

"I'll tell you how you can get sent on," said one of the Federal guards. "You just holler for Gen. Kelly, and you'll get sent on quick enough."

"Hurrah for the Confederate flag!" cried Belle Boyd in shrill, sheer bravado.

Then, as nobody came in response, she led the way back to General Kelly's office.

"It was just as I feared, ladies," said that officer gallantly. "Now, the only thing I can suggest is that maybe you would be willing to take the oath of allegiance. That would simplify matters. What do you say?"

They said nothing, but followed the general into an adjoining room, where a couple of staff officers sat at a writing desk. Federal soldiers were lounging all about, smoking and noise making. A man at the desk started to read the oath aloud. Before he had finished the first sentence Belle Boyd cried out:

"Great saints! 'It's the 'Iron-clad!'"

"We won't listen to it!" declared Gertrude promptly.

With that the two turned and marched out of the room. A loud roar of laughter went up, in which General Kelly joined.

"Just as I expected," said he, "I thought you were game."

"Now, what next, general?" asked Belle Boyd cheerily.

"If we must be hung, please notify us," added Gertrude.

"Another alternative presents itself," the general went on, seriously enough now. "Strange to say, there appears to be a Washington end to this affair, and I am expecting shortly to get word from headquarters. In any event, you will have to stop here over night. So if you will make yourselves as comfortable as circumstances permit we will hope for the best and await developments."

It was late in the evening when next they saw General Kelly. He handed them a telegram which he had just received from Washington. It read:

"Miss Page and Mrs. Smith are friends of mine. See them through if you can. If not, will send on an officer to Harpers Ferry tonight. Answer."

"BUCKTHORN."

"It is from Major General Buckthorn," explained General Kelly. "And here is a copy of my answer to him."

"Need not send. KELLY."

As soon as they were alone together Belle Boyd asked Gertrude:

"Who on earth is Major General Buckthorn? I have never heard of him."

"I have," replied Gertrude, "and he is an influential Federal commander, as you may well believe. But how he ever knew of my being here in a scrape at Harpers Ferry and why he comes to my rescue as a friend in time of need, seeing we have never met personally, I can't for the life of me understand—unless, unless—Oh, I wonder! But, tell me—I am dying of curiosity about that Confederate prisoner who spoke to us—Captain Thornton, was it not?"

"Yes. You know him?"

"The Edward Thornton whom I knew in Charleston did not have that horrid scar on his face."

"It comes in very well as a disguise, then," laughed Belle Boyd, "for Captain Thornton is in the secret service. He is a comrade of mine, and I am going to help him. This meeting has changed my plans, so you won't mind going on alone from Berryville, will you, dear? I mean Miss Page."

"No, except that I shall miss your companionship and the confidence you inspire in me—Mrs. Smith."

Here General Kelly's orderly came to announce that an ambulance would be ready to take the ladies at daylight, and would they mind sharing their room for the night with a lady and her three children on their way to Charleston?

The remainder of Gertrude's journey was comparatively uneventful, though it did seem odd at one point to have the Federal cavalrymen who escorted the ambulance called into requisition to protect her against southern stragglers as they neared the lines. She was still nominally a Federal prisoner. Nearing Winchester, a sentry demanded the young lady's papers.

"I have no papers and need none," she answered. "I am at home now. I am Miss Ellingham, and I am going to Belle Bosquet. My brother is in General Jackson's First brigade."

The Federal captain who had escorted her opened his eyes at this and said:

"I am sorry to release you, Miss What's-your-name. You might have more chance for enjoyment if you were to remain north. I mean," he added, catching a dangerous gleam in Gertrude's eye, "that you must find it dull in the south, with no beaux nor nothing."

"Our beaux are in the field, where they belong, sir," retorted the girl haughtily.

The captain bowed gallantly and made his adieu. Then Gertrude asked the gray-garbed sentry where General Jackson's army was located at the moment.

"Lawd bless you, miss, nobody knows. He mought be in Richmond by now or he mought be in Washington. They do say as how a letter come along once addressed to 'General Jackson, Somewhere,' and he got it at Woodstock. But that was 'way back two weeks ago!'"

Mrs. Haverill, the colonel's wife, had an anxious and busy time of it in Washington. Seeing little of her husband and that at moments when he was overworked and morose, she found congenial distraction in the companionship of Edith Haverill, Frank's wife, for what the latter had told Kerchival West at Washington was confirmed when the elder Mrs. Haverill went to New York and found the unfortunate young woman suffering in silence, full of loyalty, courage and gratitude, but a reality knowing no more about Frank's whereabouts than any one else did.

At the warm insistence of the Haverills, Edith came on to Washington and took up her home with them. Here her baby boy was born and they christened him after his father, so that the name of Frank Haverill should still be familiarly spoken in the household.

Then the two women, like so many others both of gentle birth and of lowly station, but above all sisters in affliction, engaged in the work of ministering to the sick and wounded soldiers who filled the wards of the improvised hospitals in the patent office building and elsewhere.

At irregular intervals during the year Edith had received sums of money from an anonymous source, carefully concealed, but somewhere in the army. She knew it was from her husband, but the only time any word accompanied the envoy was shortly after the birth of her baby, when a brief loving message filled the young mother's heart with joy and gratitude.

This communication afforded no tangible clue as to the writer's whereabouts, but it was the means of setting on foot a systematic search on the part of Colonel Haverill, who beneath the mask of Spartan indifference had in reality rejoiced at hearing of his son's resolution to make atonement by enlisting as a soldier, as reported by Kerchival West after the farewell secret interview at Charleston a year ago.

Knowing that Columbia college, New York city, had furnished a large number of recruits to the local volunteer regiments at the first call of President Lincoln, Colonel Haverill directed his inquiries among such of Frank's former classmates as he could locate in the army. He was successful to the extent of ascertaining that his son had taken special pains, in enlisting, to avoid any possible comradeship with those who knew of his disgrace. Under an assumed name he had in all probability gone south and joined the Union army of the Missouri.

With sinking heart Colonel Haverill thought of the unknown dead of the great battle of Shiloh, on the far Tennessee. And then, remembering that all evidences of son's existence in so far as the anxious young wife and mother in Washington were concerned, had ceased some months back, he only shook his head when Edith and Mrs. Haverill asked him daily if he had learned any tidings.

The colonel and his wife were none the less fond of their southern wards, Gertrude and Robert Ellingham, now that of necessity they no longer stood toward them in loco parentis.

Whatever stern military aloofness the Federal military officer may have felt obligatory upon him was compensated by a new tenderness on the part of Mrs. Haverill, particularly toward Gertrude, whom she regarded as the innocent victim of most unfortunate political misunderstanding. This feeling Gertrude reciprocated and equally without a suspicion of resentment.

Mrs. Haverill and Gertrude, as has been intimated, maintained a practically continuous correspondence. Gertrude wrote regularly to her Confederate brother, Robert Ellingham. Madeline West, on the other side of the Mason and Dixon line, also wrote to Robert, her "rebel" sweetheart, in a nonpartisan way, which also was quite different from sisterly. Of course, Bob wrote to both the girls, and it would have been highly embarrassing if he had ever got the epistles mixed. Madeline answered the copious letters and inquiries of her brother, Kerchival West, as best she could.

Jenny Buckthorne was heard to remark that Captain Heartsease's pen was mightier than his sword, so there must have been some epistolary interchange between these two, also, when the captain was away from Washington. As for General Buckthorn, still at home slowly recovering from his wound, and Colonel Haverill, preoccupied with active military responsibilities, these two old soldiers stuck doggedly to their respective duties and kept their own counsel.

Such was the complicated, unorganized system of "grapevine telegraph," which in civil war time practically did the service of what in latter days would be called the wireless.

Gertrude had been home in the valley perhaps a fortnight when she received the following illuminative epistle from her brother:

"Charlottesville, June 15.

"Dearest Sister—We have left the valley, I suppose to join in the defense of Richmond. You know what that means under Jackson. This is the first moment I have found time to write to you since you decided to quit for home. I know what you have passed through, but do you know how it came about that you got through as luckily as you did? Probably not. Now, I will tell you. It was all very well for the Richmond department to send you in certain company by way of Baltimore, but when it came to the pinch at Harpers Ferry influence at Washington had to be brought to bear. Whose influence? General—Buckthorn's. General Buckthorn must have acted at the prompting of some other Federal officer, presumably Colonel H. And how did our dear colonel happen to be so alert in behalf of a couple of southern women traveling at their own risk?"

"Gertrude, Kerchival W. is, or was, in Washington either on sick leave or on some confidential mission. He must have moved heaven and earth and even strained a point or two of discipline for your sake. I don't know the exact circumstances, but I do know old Kerchival. God bless him! He can't help it if he is a Yank."

"Now you know what he did for you and perhaps you will understand the ugly look it must have taken for him at Washington when I tell you that your dangerous traveling companion took advantage of the situation to wheedle the Federal guard at Berryville into making an exchange of prisoners with our guard and thus rescued a certain secret service officer whom you and I know only too well and who is now back again in the Confederate service. What is to come of it all I don't know, but, sis, be careful. Keep this closely to yourself and never forget it."

"When you will next hear from me and what you will hear no mortal can predict—except that I shall be found in the line of duty. May heaven bless and keep us all in the constant prayer of your errant brother,

BOB."

CHAPTER VII.
"He's a Yankee Spy!"

While Gertrude Ellingham read and reread and pondered and cried over this letter and kissed it furtively, as if in concealment from her very self, the five army corps of McClellan, having encountered the defensive Confederate forces now under direct command of General Robert E. Lee, had fought the indecisive battle of Fair Oaks, otherwise called Seven Pines, and were lined up along the Chickahominy stream, almost within gunshot of Richmond.

They thought Lee had detached a corps and sent it westward to reinforce Jackson in the valley. Instead, Jackson was sweeping eastward to join Lee, who more than a year after the commencement of the war was at last to take active command of a large army in the field.

General McClellan on the threshold of his grand opportunity at the gates of Richmond opened his assault upon Lee's lines of defense at Beaver dam, near Mechanicsville, on the Chickahominy. It was the first of the Seven Days' battles, soon to go into history.

There was fierce fighting every day that week—at Gaines' Mill, Savage Station, Glendale, all through the dark and desolate White Oak swamp and along the sluggish, noisome Chickahominy. Jackson, in his old-time fighting form again, in the field and did his full share in forcing the enemy steadily back from Richmond. But that enemy was McClellan, a foe of different caliber from any the Virginians hitherto had faced.

McClellan was indeed doggedly falling back toward the James river, but as soon as he got into communi-

DEATH THE ADVENTURE

By Sarah N. Cleghorn
Neighbors, what are the odds, though we never have left the workshop Or laid down shovel and broom, to spend the summer in Europe. Or even to sail the Great Lakes, or behold the Yosemite Valley? Already our tickets are bought for far more extended travel. Stranger lands shall we see, and with new friends make acquaintance. Courage! Home is not all; there are houses and gardens elsewhere; (Elsewhere gardens, perchance, as lovely as are the Italian.) Porter in the black cloak: Alas, I am not quite ready. Yet when the wrench is past and healed the clean stab of parting, We shall observe and enjoy the sights and the sounds of our journey, And treasure them up to repeat when we meet once more our beloved.

Wind, blow full the wide sails for death the adventurous voyage! He that has traveled but little has treasured his childhood wonder. Neighbor, what if it rest with us to give the directions, Whether the ship shall round Cape Fear, or the Cape of Good Hope?

RECIPE FOR SALAD ROLLS.

Two cups milk, lukewarm; 1 compressed yeast cake, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons sugar, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 5 cups sifted flour (level measures). Pour milk in mixing bowl, dissolve yeast cake in same. Then add salt, sugar, butter and flour. Mix smooth, cover, put in warm place and allow to rise to double its volume. Then knead and allow to rise thirty minutes. Then pull off bits of dough, fold and knead into rolls about one-half inch in thickness, and three and one-half inches in length, pointed. Place on buttered pan one inch apart, brush with melted butter and let rise for one hour. Bake twelve to fifteen minutes. When baked, brush with melted butter.

RHUBARB FANCHONETTES.

Two and one-half pounds of rhubarb, one cupful of sugar, one-half a cupful of strained orange juice, one heaping tablespoonful of powdered gelatin, the grated rind of two oranges, one cupful of whipped cream, flavored with one teaspoonful of vanilla extract and sweetened to taste, and a number of individual pastry shells.

Cut the rhubarb into one-inch pieces. Place in a baking dish in layers, sprinkling sugar between the layers, add two tablespoonfuls of water and the grated rind of the oranges. Place in a moderate oven, cover and bake for one and one-quarter hours. Dissolve the gelatin in the orange juice, and when the rhubarb is cooked, remove it from the oven and add this mixture to it. Let it get perfectly cold. When ready to serve, fill the shells with the rhubarb mixture, heap with whipped cream and decorate with finely chopped nuts.

VEAL AND HAM PIE.

One and one-half pound of veal, two hard cooked eggs, a dust of red pepper, a dust of powdered mace, one-half a teaspoonful of grated lemon rind, one-half a pound of lean ham, one heaping tablespoonful of flour, one tablespoonful of salt, one-half a teaspoonful of white pepper, one tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley, one teaspoonful of onion juice, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of powdered herbs and two chopped mushrooms.

Cut the veal and ham in very thin pieces; mix on a plate the flour, salt, pepper, parsley, sweet herbs, onion juice, powdered herbs, lemon rind, mushrooms, red pepper and mace; roll in this seasoning each piece of veal, and lay in a pudding dish, alternately, layers of veal, ham and egg, cut in slices; add three tablespoonfuls of water. Line the edge of the dish with pastry, cover with pastry, and bake in a hot oven for one and one-quarter hours. When cooked, add one-half a cupful of good seasoned stock, or one tablespoonful of dissolved gelatin may be added. Serve hot or cold.

NEW USE FOR BEESWAX.

If beeswax is used for greasing baking pans, it will not be necessary to wash them each time after baking. It never turns rancid, flavoring the cake in consequence, as is the case with lard and butter.

BAKED APPLES.

Remove the cores and fill the cavity with sugar and spices and bake without breaking the skin.

WHEN CLEANING SPOTS.

Use a little salt in the gasoline, and there will not be the objectionable ring left on the goods when dry.

SWEDISH SPONGE CAKE.

Anyone who succeeds in making this cake has a sure seller. Beat the whites of four eggs till very stiff. Beat the yolks till quite thick and light colored. Add one-half of a cupful of powdered sugar to the yolks and beat till dissolved; add another one-half of a cupful of the sugar and beat for five minutes.

Add about one-third of the stiff whites to this mixture and beat till very light. Pour this on to the remaining whites and fold in with a few strokes.

Drop on to this mixture one-half of a cupful of potato flour and one rounding teaspoonful of baking powder. Cut and fold into the mixture two or three times, add one teaspoonful each of extract of lemon, vanilla, and orange, and then beat thoroughly for one minute.

Fill the cake pan with cold water, then empty the pan, and pour in the cake mixture. The baking is most important. With just the right heat this cake needs almost an hour's baking.

BANANAS BAKED IN THE SKIN.

Select fine, large bananas—preferably the red ones. Remove a strip of skin from each and place them in a baking pan with the exposed side up. Sprinkle them with sugar, pour over a little melted butter, put two tablespoonfuls of water in the bottom of the pan. Bake in a hot oven until soft, about twenty minutes, basting frequently. Remove them from the oven, place on a dish without removing the skin, add two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice to the remaining juice in the pan and pour this over the bananas. Serve as a dessert with cream.

BANANAS SAUTED.

Peel and cut bananas into slices lengthwise. Place them in a shallow pan containing a little hot olive oil or butter. Brown quickly on both sides. Serve warm, dusted with confectioner's sugar.

To saute bananas Southern style, peel and cut into lengthwise slices. Put one tablespoonful of butter into a shallow pan and when hot add one tablespoonful of molasses. Place the bananas in this, cook slowly until brown on one side, then turn and brown on the other. These are delicious served hot with broiled chicken.

SLICED BANANAS WITH FIGS.

Peel and cut into thin slices fully ripe bananas. Place them in a glass dish with an equal quantity of whole, preserved fresh figs, the kind that come prepared in a syrup and done up in cans or glass jars. Serve very cold with heavy cream.

BANANAS AND PINEAPPLE.

Peel and cut ripe bananas into thin slices; add to the slices grated pineapple sweetened to taste, allowing about one tablespoonful of sugar, through which one-quarter of a teaspoonful of mace has been mixed. Moisten with the juice of one orange, one lemon, and one tablespoonful of orange marmalade mixed together. Cut one tablespoonful of butter into bits and put this over the top. Bake in a moderate oven about thirty minutes. Serve fresh with cream.

BANANA CAKE.

Line a square shallow baking-pan with a rich biscuit dough, rolled out very thin. Cut bananas into round slices, arrange them on the dough in rows, the slices overlapping. Sprinkle over one-third of a cupful of sugar, through which one-quarter of a teaspoonful of mace has been mixed. Moisten with the juice of one orange, one lemon, and one tablespoonful of orange marmalade mixed together. Cut one tablespoonful of butter into bits and put this over the top. Bake in a moderate oven about thirty minutes. Serve fresh with cream.

PREPARING COCONUT.

When desiring to use fresh coconuts for a cake or dessert of any kind, instead of grating it in the old way, use the meat chopper.

This may be done more quickly and the coconut is light and fluffy. This is well worth trying, especially if you are pressed for time. Fingers are often bruised through using the grater.

GRAPEFRUIT JELLY.

Soften one-half of a box of gelatin in one-half of a cupful of cold water, add one cupful of boiling water, stir till dissolved, and strain through cheesecloth. Add one cupful of sugar, the juice of one lemon and two cupfuls of grapefruit juice and pulp.

SANDWICHES CALL FOR CARE.

The hostess who has mastered the art of making good sandwiches has gone far toward mastering the art of entertaining, for any social gathering where refreshments are served lacks distinction unless it offers at least one kind of sandwich a little better than any other sandwich served at a similar entertainment.

Sandwiches should be good to look at and good to taste. Both requisites demand that all materials used in making them should be fresh, carefully prepared and of the best quality. Green, lettuce and any other sort of greens for sandwich filling should be carefully cleaned and crisped on ice for several hours before using. Meat should be freshly cooked and freed from all fat, gristle and grease. Bread should be fresh, but firm, and thinly cut. Butter should be of just the creamy consistency to make it spread easily, not so hard as to be lumpy nor so soft as to be oily.

Cutters in various fancy shapes should be a part of every sandwich maker's outfit. Hearts and triangles, circles and diamonds are among the most effective shapes. When fancy cutters are not used the sandwich should be pressed firmly together, the crusts nicely trimmed, and the square cut either in long, thin strips or diagonally across to make two triangle-shaped sandwiches.

Cream butters of various sorts help give sandwiches the distinctive tastes which whet the appetite and make every one wonder what the sandwich is made of. To make these butters cream ordinary butter and mix with it either finely chopped olives, water-cress or parsley, finely grated horseradish or cheese, or a bit of anchovy or other fish paste. Combine these various butters with fillings which blend with them in flavor and the result is always satisfactory.

Sweet, Pickle, Jelly.

This is sure to be a steady seller. As a relish with fowl or roast meats it is delicious. It can be turned into one glass or china mold, or into tiny individual molds.

Soften one tablespoonful of granulated gelatin in one-fourth of a cupful of cold water. Heat one cupful of syrup from sweet pickles and pour over the softened gelatin. Stir till dissolved, then cool and add one cupful of sweet pickles cut in small cubes, the pulp of one orange cut in similar pieces, and its juice.

Bottled cherries cut in small pieces or candied cherries add a pretty color to the mixture. Use about two tablespoonfuls of the cherries. If a sweet mango pickle is used, put the filling in also.

Stir in cold water till beginning to stiffen, then pour into molds, being careful to distribute the fruit evenly.

If one has no peach pickle, a perfect substitute can be had in sweet mixed prunes, using the dried fruit on the second or third day after pickling. Canned peaches, if firm, can be put in the sweet pickle mixture and should be ready to use in a week.

A BUTTON ECONOMY.

When the back pulls from a cloth-covered button which cannot be matched, leaving no way to attach it to a garment, take black sewing silk and sew it back and forth across the back of the button, catching tiny stitches in the cloth at the rim. When the entire edge has been covered with stitches, darn around the center, making a substantial foundation by which to sew it again to the garment.

AN ENDLESS CLOTHESLINE.

Fasten two grooved wheels wherever you want your line (for instance, one on the back porch and the other on the barn or a tree or post), and stretch a wire line around the wheel. As you hang up each piece, you can turn the wheel and thus make room for the next piece directly in front of you. The clothes may be taken from the line by this same convenient method. This saves many steps.

HANGING BEDROOM CURTAINS.

For those who like to sleep with their bedroom windows raised high at night, summer and winter, rain, snow or shine, the problem of keeping the curtains in presentable condition is a trying one. The problem has been solved quite satisfactorily by putting small hooks in the outer edge of the side hingles above the middle sash. Before retiring, loop each curtain up over its hook by the cord. This admits a free current of air, and the dampness in no wise harms the draperies. Adopt the same plan with the curtains when sweeping a room.

TOMATO JULY SALAD.

Put four heaping tablespoonfuls of powdered gelatin in a clean saucepan, add three cupfuls of water, one can of tomatoes or one and one-half pounds of fresh tomatoes, one slice of onion, one tablespoonful of tomato catsup, one tablespoonful of vinegar, one bay leaf, one blade of mace, one teaspoonful of salt, three cloves and the whites and shells of two eggs.

Beat over the fire till boiling, remove beater and allow to boil up, draw to one side and cover for five minutes. Strain and color red with a few drops of red vegetable coloring. Pour in a wet ring mold. Turn out when firm on crisp lettuce leaves, fill the center with chopped celery and broken pecan nut meats well mixed and marinated; cover with mayonnaise sauce.

DAHLIA BULBS.

These can be grown by the acre almost as easily as can potatoes, if one starts in the spring early. Transplant the seedlings once before planting in the open ground; give rich soil, water, and cultivate well. In the autumn you will be able to sell all you have to the city folks. This is nice, easy work to do, besides realizing a handsome profit.

To propagate dahlias other than by tubers, cut from a vigorous branch just below the joint and root as a geranium. If cut between joints it will root as well, but will not produce tubers. For a rare dahlia it is a much surer way than to depend on either seeds or tubers.

THE SPEED OF ANIMALS.

According to naturalists, no animal is known to have exceeded the speed attained by the famous race horse Sysonby. Instantaneous photographs show the full length of one complete stride as about twenty-five feet. In the stride of the fastest racers the hind quarters and the limbs are raised considerably higher than the shoulders and from this relatively great height brought downward and forward, widely separated from each other, as a sportsman says, "to avoid striking the forelegs." The hare which is hunted with fast hounds has not in reality the speed of the dog. The dog, on the other hand, does not attain the speed of the horse. The giraffe is said to run at the rate of fifteen meters (yards) per second under the most favorable conditions. The elephant, going at the rate of two yards a second, carries a weight approximating that carried by six horses.—Harper's.

IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN WORSE.

Mark Twain, during one of his lecture tours, was waiting at a station for a delayed train. The lecture committee and several townsmen were with him and talking their best to pass the time away. One man told about a frightfully unhealthy town he had read about, and it was a gruesome tale of dying and burials and that sort. "It might have been worse," Twain followed, in his slow and direct manner. "I lived in that same town for two years, and I never died once—not a single time." The way he said it seemed to daze the crowd, and not a man said a word in response. "Of course you may think I'm lying," the humorist continued, "and I'm sorry, for I can't get any witnesses to testify that I didn't, because everybody else that lived there is dead."

TO THE POINT.

All the world is so closely akin that not one individual may realize his high desire except all the world share it with him. Every good thought you send out is a silent power working for peace, health, love, joy, success to all humanity—including yourself.—Elizabeth Towne.

SUGAR THE HAM.

Before broiling a slice of ham rub brown sugar on it. The ham will then have a delicious flavor.

NO MORE STRIPES.

Stripes are a symbol, but so is imprisonment. The prisoner may have no worse food or bed than he had outside, and walls may restrain him no more than circumstances did before. His discipline of labor and obedience are only the common course of Adam, which, because he would not accept it freely, he must receive under constraint. But the prison is worse than other places outside, chiefly because thinking makes it so. And the stripes are a powerful influence in that thinking. Watch the confident step and the erect carriage of the "trustee," in neat vertical stripes, contrasted with the shuffling slouch of the ordinary zebra-clad convict. Different clothes make different men of them.

The decision of the prison directors and Warden Hoyle to abolish the stripes in San Quentin is one of the most important single steps in a better penology. Under the new system, the normal costume of the prisoners will be a uniform of cadet blue. There will be three classes. Each prisoner when he arrives will be placed in the middle class, distinguished by a plain blue uniform. By good conduct he may rise, as most prisoners will, to the first class, indicated by a chevron on the sleeve. Indifferent conduct may keep him in the second class or return him to the third class, in which he will have to wear the stripes. There are only a few in this class now, and it is not expected that there will ever be many. So the stripes will practically be abolished.

This is only one of the many steps which are transforming the California prisons from the worst to among the best in the world. New equipment, new methods, a new spirit and a new purpose are bringing our penitentiaries toward the goal of being the reclamation places of the reclaimable part of society's wreckage, and humane places of safekeeping for the irreclaimable part.—C. H. R. in Cal. Outlook.

BE A BOOSTER.

Do you know there's lots of people sittin' round in every town, growlin' like a broodin' chicken, knockin' every good thing down? Don't you be that kind o' cattle. 'Cause they ain't no use on earth. You just be a Booster Rooster. Crow an' boost for all you're worth.

If your town is shy on boosters, Don't hold back an' wait to see if some other feller's willin'. Sell right in; this country's free. No one's got a mortgage on it; It's just yourn as much as his. If your town needs boostin', boost 'er; You get in the boostin' biz.

If things don't seem to suit you, And the world seems kinder wrong, What's the matter with a boostin', Just to help the thing along? 'Cause if things should stop a-goin' We'd be in a sorry plight; You just keep that horn a-blowin'—Boost 'er up with all your might.

If you know some feller's fallin', Just fergit 'em, 'cause you know That same feller's got some good points; Them's the ones you want to show. Cast your loaves out on the waters, 'They'll come back' 's a sayin' true, Mebbe, too, they'll come back "but-tered". When some feller boosts for you.

PARKS VS. CRIME.

The modern way of considering the park question is, as George R. Lunn, Mayor of Schenectady, New York, puts it:

"Give us more parks and less crime and drunkenness, more parks and less jails, more parks and better health, more parks and playgrounds that by legitimate recreation our children, as well as our grown-ups, may develop a happy, useful life in a city openly standing for human welfare as important above all things else."

"Oh, doctor, my husband is to give up smoking during Lent! Isn't that lovely of him?"

"Yes, madam, and very necessary to his health. I ordered it."

"The brute!"—Judge.

When trouble comes to this town we should all stand together instead of each standing a part.

HOMKRAFT FAIR.

The entertainment committee of the Glendale Carpenters met at the home of Mr. L. F. Kirri of 324 Cedar street last Thursday night. Plans are now well under way for the next Homkraft Fair, which is to be given Tuesday night, April 15th, in Odd Fellows' Hall.

There will be an auction of "kraft" goods. All kinds of needed and artistic articles will be offered for bids; among them will be sliding book-racks, magazine stands, tabourettes, folding screens, kitchen articles, and many others.

Kracker-jack and home-made candy will be on sale and there will be a grab-box from which one may purchase articles of utility and ornamentation or a good laugh. A ticket will be given with every purchase and a drawing will be made for the grand prize, which is a beautiful folding screen of considerable value. Proceeds from the entertainment are to go into the Carpenters' Benefit Fund. A short musical program will be given.

A Poster Prize Contest will be held and the prize, a Kraft sliding book-rack, given subject to the following conditions:

A list of the stores where posters are located is required. Give a brief statement—the shorter the better—of advertising value of each store. Write your name and address on the back of your paper and leave in sealed envelope, at Cornwell & Kelly's Hardware Store not later than Monday, April 14th, at 6 p. m. The prize will be given to the one, who in the opinion of the judges turns in the best paper. The contest is open to all except the members of the entertainment committee and their families.

Arrangements are being made to handle a large crowd. Come and bring your friends. Admission free.

"THIMBLE BEE."

Quaint and charming was the Thimble Bee given Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. William Elmer Evans of 113 Orange street, when she received in honor of her house-guest, Mrs. Robert McKee Jackson of Kentucky.

Wild mustard and bridal wreath, artistically combined, were unusually effective in the handsome brown-toned living room of Mrs. Evans' home where the following guests were received: Mrs. V. Price Brown, Mrs. George B. Woodberry, Mrs. W. W. McElroy, Mrs. John Robert White, Mrs. Walter Stanyss, Mrs. Charles Temple, Mrs. Rivers Morrell, Mrs. E. T. Tholen, Mrs. Ralph Hinckley, Mrs. Daniel Campbell, Mrs. W. R. Middleworth, Mrs. Charles Evans, Mrs. H. M. Overton, Mrs. H. E. Bartlett, Mrs. H. H. Martin, Mrs. F. W. Pigg, Mrs. Mattison B. Jones, Mrs. L. A. Phillips, Mrs. M. Ewell Smith and Mrs. A. W. Beach.

A clever thimble contest kept the guests employed during the afternoon. Mrs. W. R. Middleworth winning head prize.

Tiny tables prettily arranged to accommodate four were set in the dining room, where a two-course tea was served. Beautiful flower bouquets of bridal wreath graced the center of each table; favors were footslops fashioned from yellow crepe paper and tiny baskets filled with bon-bons.

Aside from the hostess and honor guest, Mrs. F. W. Pigg assisted during the afternoon.

BRAHM VAN DEN BERG, ONE OF THE FIVE GREAT PIANISTS OF THE WORLD.

One of the most interesting musical events ever to be given here in Glendale is that of Brahm van den Berg, the eminent Dutch pianist, scheduled for Thursday evening, April 10th, at the Union High School.

The musically inclined will have the pleasure of hearing one of the greatest programs ever played on the concert platform, and Mr. van den Berg will know how to render it artistically, too.

This noted artist, it will be remembered, was last heard of in Los Angeles with Mme. Emma Calve, just a year ago. Since then he has been to Europe and gained fresh laurels, only to return to California and give to his adopted country the fruits of his success. You read of a temperament that touches with the inspiration of a poet—van den Berg has it; of intellectual quality that holds in abeyance the frenzy of inspiration and gives logical consistency to inspired thought—van den Berg has it.

He plays Bach with a modern poetic scholarism that gives to counterpoint the glamour of Chopin. He plays Chopin with a subtle charm and mystery that reveal the artistic nature of an improvisator, a musician of modern times. When virtuosity is the vehicle of musical thought, he can make his instrument emit luminous sparks. It will be long before one hears such a convincing virtuoso combined with a temperament which permits him to render the most difficult renditions with ease and artistry. He is a discovery, a sensation, to use the most abused words, and bringing him to Los Angeles we have secured a distinctive artist of the first magnitude. There is no doubt but van den Berg is one of the coming great pianists of the age. He is a European whom California has captured and it will be well to hold him here. Glendale is fortunate to have secured this brilliant artist from Antwerp, and it will not be well to obscure him unduly as a teacher, for he is too brilliant and artistic a pianist to be suppressed in routine.

Mr. van den Berg has been soloist with the Theodore Thomas Symphony, the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra and especially achieved fame for his capital renditions of the Grieg Concerto.

With more space to write we could name some of the greatest critics of the East, such as Wison G. Smith, the composer-critic of Cleveland; Philip Hale, of Boston; Leopold Borowski, William G. Sherwood and D. Florenzo Ziegfeld, all of Chicago, etc., who unanimously proclaimed this artist a thorough, musically musician, the highest tribute that can be paid to any artist, coming as it were, from America's creme of the musical firmament.

We have to thank Mr. Spenser Robinson, who has always the future of Glendale at heart, along with the aid of the clever wife of Mr. Pulliam, for the opportunity of bringing this artist in our midst. Mr. van den Berg has never appeared when the price of admission has been less than one, two and three dollars per seat. Mrs. Pulliam and Mr. Robinson being anxious to have Glendale hear this great artist have priced the seats at 50 cents.

Society is flinging itself against privilege like a bird against the bars of a cage.

"PEACE."

Dr. William Carter, general secretary of the International Peace Forum and a lecturer of national reputation on the subject of "Peace," will address a public mass meeting to be held in the High School Auditorium, Tuesday evening, April 8, at 8 p. m. Various organizations of the valley are engaged in furthering the interest in this meeting, including the Tuesday Afternoon club of Glendale, the Thursday Afternoon club of Tropic, the Parent Teacher Federation, the Sisterhood of P. E. O., the W. C. T. U., the Federated Brotherhood and others.

A musical program will consist of vocal solos by William Herman West, accompanied by Mrs. Dora L. Gibson and violin solos by Cecil Randall, accompanied by Carlson Padelford. Mrs. Mary Howard Gridley will preside as chairman of the evening.

The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held Friday, April 4, 2:30 p. m., at the home of Mrs. J. E. Colvin, 217 East First street. Mrs. Lucy D. Wilhoit will be present and talk along some line of the work. Everybody welcome.

Mrs. Barber was formerly Helen Best, a resident of Glendale and a member of the local chapter of P. E. O.

The Verdugo Park baseball team defeated the Los Angeles Evening Herald team at the Park last Sunday afternoon, with a score of 2 to 1. The game was a battle royal for the batteries, as the score ran 0 to 0 until the last half of the eighth inning, when the Park team made their two points.

Wm. Drysdale of Chicago has been spending two months in the "sunshine," one of them in Glendale, the other month in our big suburb, Los Angeles. Mr. Drysdale was for thirty years a business partner of our Ezra F. Parker, in the printing business, which still continues. He was much in love with Glendale, and more so with its hospitable, social people. His soldier button gave him access to the G. A. R., and his pleasant manners did the rest in enabling him to say as he did: "What nice people here." He left April 1st for San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and home via the Northern route.

Hon. J. W. Eddy, now living in retirement at his new home at Eagle Rock, comes over to Glendale occasionally to break the monotony. Mr. Eddy was a veteran legislator in Illinois, serving in the House in 1868, and in the Senate 1870 to 1874 from the Kane county (Aurora) district. He was over the other day, after the Omaha "zephyr," which reminded him: "I was in St. Louis the night of that awful cyclone that cut that channel of destruction through that city in March, 1873," said he. "In East St. Louis nothing escaped in its path. I saw with my own eyes—though scarcely able to believe them—the great big 'Wabash' engine that was lifted from the track and dumped to one side, as if it were a paper toy."

Mrs. C. E. Russell of East Third street is spending the month of April visiting her daughter, Mrs. Stewart Russell of Bakersfield.

Mr. Floyd Ray of Long Beach enjoyed Saturday and Sunday visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Lee of North Cedar street.

Mrs. W. M. Barnes of Chicago is expected at the home of her nephew, Dr. Leon H. Hurtt of Third street, the early part of the week, where she will remain as house-guest.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Menzley of West Third street were host and hostess Wednesday evening, when the Five Hundred club, consisting of sixteen members, gathered at their home.

In honor of their house-guests, Mrs. Sadie Corzine and Miss Eva Corzine, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Goode of Cedar street are planning a number of trips to various points of interest in Southern California.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Goss of West Fifth street have accompanied their house-guest, Mrs. John M. Jackson, to her home in Chicago, where they will remain as her guests during the next four weeks.

On Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Harry Whaley of Maryland avenue entertained the members of the Myosotis Whist club at their home. The evening was as pleasant as those formerly enjoyed by the same club a year ago.

Mrs. E. H. McPherson of Pittsburg will return to her home during the middle of this month, after enjoying a sojourn of several months in Glendale at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. McPherson of Pioneer Drive.

On Sunday afternoon Mrs. Leon H. Hurtt of West Third street will be among the guests of Mrs. William M. Milne of South Pasadena, who will serve tea aboard the Chinese pirate junk, Ning Po, which has recently been brought from China and anchored off the coast of Venice.

FRUIT GROWERS' DEPARTMENT

The way they teach agriculture in the high school of Fairfield, Nebraska, may have in it something helpful for other high schools in prosperous farming communities. The class in agriculture visits the neighborhood farms, and the farmers turn teachers for the occasion. If the farm is a stock-farm, for example, the farmer gives the class a short account of the particular stock that he breeds, gives his reasons for breeding it, and describes his methods of feeding, handling and marketing. To this lecture the pupils come primed with all the facts they can get from text-books and teachers—facts that spring into life and interest as the students of theory talk with the man of practice.

UTILIZING FROZEN FRUIT.

Since the occurrence of the January frost, when so much fruit was damaged, there has been an effort made by fruit growers to ascertain what use can be made of the frozen oranges. It is said that D. J. Carpenter, the orange and lemon grower of Del Rosa, recently shipped a carload of frozen lemons to the Citrus Products company's plant in Redlands for conversion into the by-products of the lemon, oil being taken from the juice. Through the experimentation at the laboratory at the company's plant it has been found that the frozen fruit loses very little, if any, of its qualities. It has been demonstrated that the loss of weight consequent upon freezing is due wholly to evaporation of water from the lemons and oranges and that the acid content of the lemon remains in the fruit, as does the sugar content of the oranges, and therefore for manufacturing purposes the frozen fruit is found to be entirely satisfactory and as a result much of the fruit which otherwise would have to be thrown away can be worked up.

FORCING SEED TO GERMINATE.

Take double pieces of cotton flannel, saturate thoroughly with water, place seeds between the pieces, and put in a warm place. Keep the cloths constantly moist. The seeds will sprout in from one to three days, when they may be transferred carefully to the ground, or small pots, being covered to about the same depth as in original planting. If you place garden peas in a colander or sieve and pour boiling water over them just before planting, they will germinate much sooner than if planted otherwise.

AN EXPERIMENT IN WALNUTS.

An experiment that will be watched with great interest throughout the valley is being tried on the Newlan ranch. Two hundred black walnut trees have been cut down to within about three feet of the ground and grafted to English walnuts. Five grafts were set to each trunk. It is expected that the new wood will make a growth of about two feet this year and that the trees will come into commercial bearing in about three years. There are a large number of black walnut orchards in the valley, and should the English variety prove a success a great many of these will undoubtedly be grafted over. English walnuts are a very profitable crop, while the black walnuts are of practically no commercial value. The grafting on the Newlan ranch was done by Alcorn and Tichenor, of the Owens Valley Nursery.—Owens Valley Herald.

DICTOGRAPH TO SAVE FOWLS.

K. M. Turner, inventor of the dictograph, has rigged up the buildings on his farm at West Nyack with a unit of burglar alarm system to trap chicken thieves. Turner is a poultry fancier and keeps hundreds of hens on his Ridge egg farm that have more than once proved tempting to prowlers. After considerable study he devised a wire system that can be made to do the work of a telephone, burglar alarm or dictograph. The contrivance is used during the day as a telephone system to the various farm buildings, which are connected with the superintendent's residence. When the lights go out on the farm the turning of a switch transforms the device into a burglar alarm.

A SPIDER AND A FISH.

"The amazing strength of spiders is shown in a number of well-authenticated instances," a biologist says: "Thus we have an instance of a half-inch spider catching a two-inch fish. It was of the ground or wolf family. A scientist came upon it struggling with a fish on the edge of a little pool. Its claws were buried in the fish's tail. It had the tail out of the water, but the head still remained underneath. Like a fiend the spider struggled to pull the fish up on the bank, and the fish struggled desperately to draw the spider into the pool. For ten minutes the scientist watched this silent and deadly fight. Then he hurried away for a bottle in which to put the combatants when he captured them. He was gone about half an hour, and on his return the end had come. The fish was dead, and the spider was slowly dragging its victim away."—London Express.

BASEBALL PLAYERS AND OTHER ATHLETES.

An athlete won a cup, and it was proposed to fill it with wine for his delectation. "No," said the winner. "I won the cup through the use of my legs, and I will take care not to lose my legs through the use of the cup."

Would that every one who is running life's race were as wise. There would be many more winners in reaching the goal of success.

Mr. Robert Béscher, who has attained world-wide prominence as the greatest base-stealer and run-getter in the National League, says that he never used tobacco or liquor in any form in his life. In writing for a recent number of the Baseball Magazine on the severe training that members of college football elevens receive, Mr. Béscher says:

"They may neither eat nor drink anything that is prohibited by the trainer, and they live a regular life which is as carefully gauged as the schedule of a railway. All this seems very irksome to many players, but it is the one thing upon which their success depends. Most of them are wise enough to realize this and to profit by it. I believe practically every trainer in the country will not allow men under his charge to smoke cigarettes. This matter has been discussed a great deal in baseball lately, with varying opinions. However it may be in baseball, I am quite sure it is entitled to some respect in football. The man who smokes cigarettes may not feel their effect in any other way save in his wind, but after he has played a half or a quarter in football, he will recognize the difference. Football takes a man's wind more than any other game, for he has to be on the move pretty nearly all the time, much of the time traveling at full speed. Then, too, there is a tremendous amount of muscular exertion in a football contest, and this tells on a man whose lung power is weakened by the use of cigarettes. So far as I am concerned, these trainers' rules never affected me one way or the other, for I have never smoked a cigarette in my life, or any other form of tobacco."

The young athlete who aims to play football and make a reputation for himself can make up his mind at the outset to let cigarettes go. Other forms of smoking are bad, though not so injurious. However, if he wishes to be a genuine star, he should give them all up. But two men on the Washington, D. C., baseball team used cigarettes. One of these was an exceptional pitcher when he joined the team; but, after having smoked cigarettes for some time, he became less dependable. The manager advised him to stop smoking. On failing to do this it became necessary in time to transfer him to a minor team. Not making good in his new position, he was transferred to a still minor team. Until this young man corrects his habits, we may be sure that the inclined plane will be his persistent record, that he will be continually dropping to lower and lower positions.

If abstinence from liquor and tobacco is necessary for the success of the athlete, is it not equally necessary for him who means to win in any line of this world's work? If the athlete willingly abstains, how much more so should all who wish to make a record in the things of greater worth?—The Instructor.

BURYING A WATER SUPPLY.

Most rodents are provident creatures and store a supply of food for winter use. The Egyptian jerboa, which is a kind of jumping mouse, is quite as thrifty as the rest of its race, but is singular in this—that it stores up not food, but water. The jerboa is found most generally in arid regions, in which the dry season lasts six months, during which time not even a drop of dew falls. In these places, however, there grows, just at the close of the rainy season, a bitter but extremely juicy melon. As soon as it is ripe the jerboa gnaws through its stem, digs away the earth beneath it and lets it drop into the hole thus formed. The wind soon covers it with sand, which not only conceals it, but also protects it from the heat. On the coming of the drought the jerboa seeks out one after another of these natural water barrels and slakes its thirst at them until the rainy season sets in once more. As the jerboa lays up a supply of from forty to fifty melons, there is no danger of its store of water running short.

FOR EMERGENCIES.

In some of the college settlements there are penny savings banks for children. One Saturday a small boy arrived with an important air and withdrew two cents from his account. Monday morning he promptly returned the money.

"So you didn't spend your two cents," observed the worker in charge.

"Oh, no," he replied, "but a fellow just likes to have a little cash on hand over Sunday."—Harper's.

A profitable crop cannot be grown on land deficient in humus, which is the same thing as rotted sod or rotted manure, with fertilizer alone.

USEFUL RIVER.

The water of the Santa Ana river in Southern California, is probably used more variously if not thoroughly than any other stream of its size in this country. Some of it is stored in a reservoir in the San Bernardino Mount to generate electric power. Not far from the reservoir the water passes through a second power plant. Below this it is distributed for irrigation and municipal purposes in Redlands and the vicinity. Much of the water used in irrigation is recovered in springs and flowing wells and by pumping-plants that utilize some of the power developed higher up the stream. Part of this recovered water goes back into the river above Riverside Narrows, where it is again taken out into a power ditch. A few miles farther on, the water is distributed to the groves of fruit-trees about Santa Ana and Anaheim. A bulletin of the United States Geological Survey says of the river, "A single drop of water in its progress from the mountains to the sea, a distance of only 100 miles, may thus be used as many as eight times for power and irrigation."

NATURE'S BOXES.

We have all sorts of boxes in use today, and some of these are of clever design and workmanship; but nature invented the first box and also one of the most perfect. The stout shell or box in which she packs her Brazil nuts beats any of the Chinese puzzles.

The nuts are packed in this box and when removed by man it is impossible to restore them to their original place. There seems insufficient room for them in the stout shell, and it is a puzzle that has not yet been solved how to get the nuts back again.

But even more wonderful is the shell of the tortoise, which is so marvelously adapted to the living creature within that it is called the box of boxes. It is perfect in construction, and when the tortoise is inside it fills every bit of space.

In recent years a good deal of work has been given to the construction of boxes or other round things that would not roll off the edge of a flat surface. Now the egg of the hen is notorious for its tendency to roll off a shelf and break. We have today all sorts of round things so ingeniously constructed that they cannot roll off.

They simply roll round and round in the same spot and therefore they are perfectly safe laid anywhere on a flat shelf or table. But nature knew all about that trick years ago. She built the egg of a seabird called the murre on this principle. Place one of those eggs on the edge of a table and it will not roll off. If disturbed it simply rolls round and round in nearly the same spot. Nature evidently designed the eggs of the murre in this way because the bird had a habit of laying them on shelving rocks where a slight wind might easily blow them off. It was a protective precaution that saved the birds many unpleasant tragedies.

ROAD TO SUCCESS.

There is no road to success but through a clear, strong purpose—nothing can take its place. A purpose underlies character, culture, position, attainment of every sort.—T. T. Munger.

Good looking fruit on top of the basket will get you new customers, but only honest quality lower down will keep them.

Cut the branches close to the larger ones or main trunk, and cover the fresh wound with white lead and oil to keep out the air.

SPEECH OF ACCEPTANCE.

One time an English journalist was visiting in Washington. He had the proverbial British obtuseness when it came to getting the point of a joke, and the newspaper men at the capital had a good deal of fun at his expense. But he was a good fellow and when he was leaving the boys gave him a dinner.

When the time for the speeches arrived the toastmaster spoke of the pleasure the Englishman's visit had given all present, and the regret that all felt at his departure. In conclusion, he said—without a twinkle of the eye:

"And now, it becomes my duty to see that you do not leave us without something to remember us by. In behalf of the Press club I now present you with this ring."

Then, leaning across the table, he struck a silver bell that had been left between him and the guest. Everybody laughed but the latter. To everybody's surprise, he arose in his place, picked up the bell, admired it, and put it in his pocket. Then he cleared his throat and there was silence for his speech:

"Ah—er—gentlemen, I thank you for this charming—ah, gift. I am not a public speaker and so I'm a bit embarrassed. But—ha—ha! I know why you all laugh. Your—ah—chairman was just as embarrassed as I am. He gave me this pretty bell, you know—and he got confused and said it was a ring, by Jove! I must tell that when I get home!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"When he comes will you be here?"

"Yep."
"Say, when he comes will you tell him I told you to tell him that on his way from the cheese factory will he stop an' git that shoat of Herman Langer's an' take it down to Fred Wilkins an' tell Fred that I said he could have it fer that single harness even up, if he'll fix up that bridle and throw in them russet lines 'stead o' the old black ones; and if he won't swap tell Tom to bring it down to my place an' put it in the extra pen an' be sure an' shut that door to the henhouse or all the chickens'll get out. MUSICAL SOUND AND THE EAR.

The well-trained ear of a musician can distinguish notes differing only one-hundredth part of a tone from one another. Most people cannot perceive a difference of one-tenth of a tone, and a few can scarcely tell one tone from another. The cause of this curious disparity resides in slight differences in the structure of the cochlea, a wonderful piece of apparatus in the innermost part of the ear. It is a little body shaped like a snail shell and believed to be the part of the hearing apparatus which recognizes musical sounds. In its structure it closely resembles the strings of a piano and even has a damper to prevent the mixture of sounds quickly following one another. This little musical apparatus is set going by vibrations received from the middle ear or drum, and in some mysterious manner it sends these on to the brain through the auditory nerve in the form of musical sounds.

GLENDALE HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The Senior Class of High held their much-advertised entertainment on last Friday night. During the afternoon the town was startled by a parade announcing the evening's event. The parade consisted of a five-piece German band, half a dozen Watermillions coons, an assortment of clowns, and last, but the biggest attraction of all, a good-looking bunch of "Middy Girls" who sold tickets as fast as they could be supplied. The entertainment itself was a success, a Mr. E. M. Bonnel and Co. from the city furnishing the program. The dainty little Miss Clare Connors gave a number of solos. The Trombone Quartette gave three instrumental selections and Miss Charlotte Powers a number of readings. Mr. Bonnel himself proved a very versatile entertainer and introduced in his final act, three dark-complexioned Watermelon kids.

The proceeds of the entertainment will go towards publishing the Seniors' Stylus.

Last week there were a number of Student Assemblies called in order to arrange for the decoration of the Auditorium for the High School Oratorical inter-class contest. As the admission of twenty-five cents is to be charged the main issue at the meetings was to lessen the cost of decorations which heretofore have been very elaborate, especially on the students' pocketbooks. It was at last decided that no booth was to cost more than five dollars per class.

At the suggestion of Mr. Howe a box has been placed in the office where students may leave money which will be forwarded to the flood sufferers in Ohio and Indiana. Mr. Darsey gave the thirty dollars which was voted to him by the student body for expenses during his recent injury as a nest egg to the fund.

The interclass oratorical contest will be held this (Friday) evening at the High School Auditorium. The different classes will have artistically decorated booths in which they will be seated. The personal attire of the different classes will be very amusing if the present plans are carried out. Carol Willisford will represent the Freshmen; Leslie Tarr the Sophomores; Jennie Boring the Juniors, and Alma Turner the Seniors. A musical program will also be given. This year a general admission of 25 cents will be charged. This is one of the most interesting events of the school year and should be well attended. The winner of this contest will go to Pasadena to represent Glendale in the Suburban Oratorical League.

A large number of the High school boys went to the Temple Auditorium in Los Angeles Tuesday afternoon to hear Dr. Steiner's address to the Student League Body.

Mr. White gave the twelfth year history class a very interesting recital of the stirring events of John Brown's raid on Harper's Ferry. Mr. White's father was an eye-witness and his material is not found in books.

The advanced class in cookery are experimenting in paper-bag cooking, and served a luncheon Thursday to the wives of some of the faculty members.

The advanced class in sewing are having their first experience in millinery work. The past week was spent in learning to handle the wire, that they may be able to remodel hats and they have completed their wire frames. Some are planning to make shirred hats, others will cover their frames with braid. The work has proved to be very interesting and helpful.

The G. U. H. S. Brass Band made its first appearance at the ball game Wednesday afternoon. The personnel is as follows:

Solo Cornet.....Merrill Burke
First Cornet.....J. T. Beach
First Clarinet.....Wilmot McIntyre
Trombone.....I. S. Brown
Bass.....Percy McIntyre
Snare Drum.....Olin Dow
Bass Drum.....Tom Furst

The band is directed by Percy McIntyre.

There will be a sectional meeting of the Home Economics teachers of Los Angeles County in Whittier Saturday, April 5th. At this time discussion will be given to the uniformity of courses in the various high schools. Miss Darsie and Miss Holloway will represent our high school.

The Associated Girl Students were addressed this afternoon by Miss Fuller, recently from India, who talked on the subject of "A Girl's Education in India." Miss Fuller appeared in the costume of a Mahattai Christian girl, which is an adaptation of the ordinary Mahattai dress. The lecture included also the rendition of Indian folk songs and ballads. Miss Fuller, who recently addressed the English classes in Warren Hastings, is a very fascinating speaker, and the A. G. S. consider themselves fortunate to have secured her for their first address.

Tropico Notes

The Parent Teachers' Association of the Tropico grammar school will hold its regular meeting in the school house at 3:15 o'clock this (Friday) afternoon. It is understood that an excellent program has been arranged for the affair and a number of important questions will come up before the meeting. Mrs. Harry L. Edwards, wife of the editor of the Tropico Sentinel, will address the meeting on the subject, "Fear and Its Relation to Children." At this date a new trustee will be elected to fill the vacancy on the board of school trustees caused by the expiration of the term of Dwight Griswold.

Mr. and Mrs. Hal H. Davenport and family of Glendale avenue are entertaining Mr. Davenport's father, Mr. H. W. Davenport of McCook, Neb. Mr. Davenport will remain here for several weeks.

In the very near future Mrs. Andrew Glassell of Glassell Park, will be on a trip around the world. She will be accompanied by her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Will Glassell. Their first stopping place will be Honolulu. It is expected that they will be touring between three and four years.

After visiting friends in New York and other Eastern cities and states, Mrs. Joseph Griffin returned to her home on Acacia avenue at a recent date.

At a recent meeting held by Chapter A. H. P. E. O., the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Cora Webster; vice-president, Mrs. Kate Stevenson; recording secretary, Mrs. Greta Lynch; financial secretary, Mrs. Amelia Wattle; treasurer, Mrs. Grace Hobbs; chaplain, Mrs. Sala Logan; guard, Mrs. Laura Bancroft; journalist, Mrs. Carolyn Conrad; organist, Mrs. Gertrude Chandler. Mrs. Cora Webster, Mrs. Carolyn Conrad and Mrs. Amelia Wattle were elected as delegates to attend the state convention at San Diego in May.

The postmaster of Tropico is making an appeal to the residents of this place to locate somewhere upon the front of their residences a suitable place for the receiving of mail matter when it is delivered by the postal employees. It seems that ever since the establishment of the free delivery system there have been some people who have refused or neglected to provide suitable mail boxes at their homes. A number of responses have already been made to the request of the postmaster.

The erection of a bungalow has been started at the corner of Euallia street and Glendale avenue by Frank Morris, inspector on the Santa Fe road, with headquarters in Los Angeles.

A. O. Devol, the builder at this city, has now four five-room bungalows in course of construction in this city, the last one to be started being on Los Angeles street, between Cypress-street and Victor court.

C. W. Carpenter and H. Buerly, both of Los Angeles, were taken before Justice Melrose of this place by Will Gould, city marshal, charged with violating the speed ordinance of this city. They plead guilty and were fined five dollars and costs each.

A. J. McAdams, who for the past year or so has been managing the business of the Tropico Lumber company, has entered the real estate business with his brother, Harry L. McAdams, with offices at the corner of Brand boulevard and Park avenue. Both of the young men are well and favorably known in this valley and the News predicts a brilliant future for them. F. L. Lake, who has been managing the Campbell Lumber company's business at San Jacinto, has been selected to pilot the business of the Tropico Lumber company.

The Vidor lodge, Knights of Pythias, of this place, gave a dancing party in the lodge rooms in the Galt block Thursday evening. There was a good attendance and the usual enjoyable time.

E. W. Haviland has started the construction work on an eight-room Swiss chalet bungalow, on lot 20, block 4, tract 910. The contractors are Charles W. Kent & Son, of Brand boulevard.

George Chandler has purchased of Mrs. Mary E. Molle, two lots at the corner of Acacia street and Brand boulevard for a consideration of $2250.

The Ladies' Aid of the Tropico Methodist church held an all-day meeting in the church Tuesday. The time was occupied in needlework. At noon a luncheon was served.

GRAND CLEANUP AT TROPICO.

There has been something doing in Tropico this week. On April 1st the people of the budding little city played an April fool stunt on the surrounding country by turning in with a will and beginning the work of setting forth to the world a bright, clean and healthful community. Never has any section in Southern California had it on Tropico as far as a clean city is concerned, but this cleanup move shows that the Tropico people are not willing to be classed as merely a clean city, but they want their section to be known as a "very clean little city." To this end a five-days' spell of cleaning up is going on at this place.

The following circular was distributed among the residents of Tropico and this did much toward stimulating the people to action:

"Clean Up Tropico.—Each and every citizen of Tropico is earnestly requested to devote all of the time necessary during the first five days of April to a thorough cleanup of the city. Place your premises in first-class sanitary condition during this week. See that your neighbors learn of this plan and do all you can to make it a success.

"Street Superintendent Fishback requests that you burn all rubbish which can be disposed of in this way, then deposit in boxes, barrels, etc., at the curbs in front of your property such stuff as will not burn, that it may conveniently be removed by the street department wagons."

This communication was signed by Dr. William C. Mabry, health officer of this city.

AGED PREACHER LEAVES FOR HOME.

Rev. D. M. Stuart, formerly pastor of the Tropico Presbyterian church and founder of that institution, died on Tuesday of last week, the burial services being held from the Tropico Presbyterian church Friday afternoon, Rev. Cyrus B. Hatch, the present pastor of the church, officiating. In 1908 Rev. Stuart came to Tropico and for several months he and the Presbyterians of Tropico held weekly meetings in Logan's hall in the Logan block. The church prospered to such an extent that it was decided to erect a church edifice, and at once work was started. The structure was completed during the year 1908 and has been in use ever since. Rev. Stuart continued as pastor of this church for three years and a half.

Six years ago Rev. Stuart accepted a call from the Presbyterian church at National City, Cal., which charge he occupied for four years. He then resigned, but he and Mrs. Stuart continued their residence at National City.

Rev. Stuart was born in Spring Water, N. Y., February 17, 1838, and after graduating from Hima seminary and Hillsdale college in Michigan, and the Cartersville Baptist Institute, he entered the ministry at the age of thirty years. For twenty-five years Rev. Stuart served the Baptist church as pastor, after which he joined the Presbyterian church and served in various pastorates until his retirement two years ago. In 1861 Mr. Stuart and Miss Mary M. Day were united in marriage.

Mr. Stuart is survived by a widow and one daughter, Mrs. Minnie Hanson, wife of Dr. W. F. Hanson of Los Angeles. The body of Rev. Stuart was interred in the Forest Lawn cemetery at this place.

West Glendale

After spending the past month in Santa Monica, Mrs. M. J. Miner has returned to her home on Ivy street.

Mr. W. H. Sands and family have moved into their new home just finished at 1445 Burchett street. Mr. Sands, Sr., is a retired business man of Philadelphia, while his son is assistant auditor of the Pacific Telephone Co. in Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fencetermaker, who have been occupying the Penna property, 1517 Ivy Street, expect to move into their new home, 145 Central avenue, in a few days. Mr. Fencetermaker is a newspaper man, having recently sold his advertising magazine in San Diego. He will, in a short time, start another in Los Angeles.

Mr. Sanders and family, with a party of friends, spent Sunday at Long Beach, greatly enjoying their outing.

How nice it is to be called "Grandpa." At least that is what J. H. Flower thinks; and in consequence he is wearing a broad-brimmed smile, wherever he goes, and can be seen casting "sheep's eyes" at baby bugles, rattles, etc., and at the same time trying to look unconcerned; but oh, my! how hard he finds it!

Mr. R. H. Wells is having improvements made on his home, 1504 West Broadway.

Mrs. J. J. Schemp recently entertained at luncheon, complimentary to Mrs. Charles Hubbard of Omaha, who has been spending the winter with her sister, Mrs. Boyd. Covers were laid for Mrs. Charles Hubbard, Mrs. M. J. Woodruff, Mrs. R. B. Boyd and Mrs. Schemp.

The wild Indian has apparently disappeared forever. Even the great chiefs, who in native costume watched President Taft break ground for the Indian memorial at the entrance to New York harbor a few weeks ago, were not what they seemed. One of them, whose war-bonnet showed a face streaked with yellow and vermilion, was looking at the great East river bridge when a bystander attempted by signs and motions to impress him with an idea of its size. After a little the Indian interrupted him with the remark, "Yes, it's some bridge, all right." He is a graduate of Carlisle. The ancestral costume was for the occasion only.—Youth's Companion.

Superintendent of Schools J. H. Francis of Los Angeles made the statement recently that "Los Angeles school teachers are the healthiest and prettiest educators" that he has ever seen. We would be pleased to have Mr. Francis visit the Glendale schools and then hear his opinion on the subject.

Frank D. Booth, employed by the Pacific Telephone company in Glendale for a number of years, is now working for the company in Los Angeles.

ROCKEFELLER'S CADDY.

John D. Rockefeller, the story goes, was playing golf at Augusta, Ga., when, in order to enter into conversation with his caddy, he asked the boy how to make his stroke. The boy gave the instruction as best he could. Mr. Rockefeller pretended to be following his advice, and the stroke was a brilliant one. "Say, mister," said the boy, "if you had my brains and I had your strength, what a great team we'd make!"

GLENDALÉ HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The Glendale High School ball team defeated the Harvard Military Academy team Wednesday afternoon at the high school grounds with a score of 16 to 1. The game was called to a close at the first of the eighth inning on account of the late hour. Glendale made its first game a successful one by all-round good playing, and shows prospects for a successful season. The line-up was as follows:

Harvard	Glendale
Works	P.....Farnar
Boydson	1st B.....Snively
Wood	2nd B.....Nelson
Hidden	3rd B.....Good
Schlegel	s.s.....Fischel
Metalf	c.....Breedon
Merideth	r.f.....McIver
Barret	l.f.....McNutt
Lukins	c.f.....Blackington

Bidwell was substituted for Farnar during the game. Another Harvard pitcher was put in the place of Works.

The brass band failed to materialize, as told of in the other part of the notes. "The wind was so high," according to one of the members, "that the music could not have been heard."

See the announcement of Brahm Van den Berg's concert in another column.

The County Peace Oratorical Contest will be held Friday evening at South Pasadena at 8 o'clock, where contestants from high schools at Glendale, Covina, Monrovia and Bonita will take part. Glendale will be represented by Earl Farnsworth. The winner obtains a fine set of Shakespeare's works and represents Los Angeles county in the Inter County Contest.

ICE CREAM SOCIAL.

The Queen Esther of the Baptist Sunday school will give an ice cream social this Saturday evening in the basement of the church. Everybody welcome. Admission 15c.

The village band makes sweet music, but it isn't in it with the village carpenter.

We needn't go into details on the first point. You know how we make our money. We buy land by the acre, sell it by the lot; build houses at wholesale, sell them at retail. It's a safe, sane, highly profitable business—a tried and tested formula that will make money as long as Southern California progresses. That means for a good many centuries to come. And note this: we don't restrict ourselves to home-building. We deal in down-town leases, develop farm land and industrial properties; in short, make money in any branch of the local realty field in which we see a profit. So much for point No. 1.

Now as for Point No. 2.—Your partners in this business—the men at the helm—what about them? Not much question about their ability and integrity. They're big, broad-gauge business men, men who've scored big successes in the business world. Look 'em up—ask your banker about them—their records and reputations assure you of a square deal. And remember:

You Are Paying Exactly the Same Price For Your Stock That They Paid

50c per share. No promotion stock has been issued—not a dollar's worth of stock has been sold for less than 50c; no real estate has been traded for stock. And you, Mr. Investor, are offered a chance to engage in a safe, sane, highly-profitable business with these men on a basis of absolute equality. But you've got to get action pretty promptly. The price of this stock is due for a stiff advance—only a matter of a few days now. Drop into the office; post yourself on every detail of our business. Write for our free booklet. Do It Now.
